Your Childhood Years

Describe yourself as a child:

As a child I was happy, deeply caring, and appreciative of things around me. My mother has told me that I had "big" things to say such as, Isn't today just a wonderful day? I was always thoughtful and in tune to the emotions of people around me. I was always looking for ways to make the people around me smile, such as picking "flowers" (dandelions) for my mom.

What was it like growing up in your family? My parents got a divorce when I was very young, about when I was 3 years old. However, I feel fortunate that their separation was not as traumatic as it could have been and they have stayed civil and professional with each other throughout my life. Life at my mother's was primarily school-focused and she provided for us as a single mom for some time. I loved and still do love my older brother very much and consider him one of my best friends.

What is your earliest memory as a child?

I remember vaguely being at the house that we lived in when my mother and father were still married. I remember climbing around on our couch and listening to my father's music and trying to go find him and tell him that I liked it.

What was your favorite thing to do? When I was very young my favorite thing to do was whatever my brother was interested in or was doing. I was also obsessed with organizing my toy cars, playing with some of my favorite action figures and other toys. Additionally, I was (and still am) obsessed with animals and pets. I love giving dogs chin scratches and cuddling with cats.

Your parents taught you to value: I would say that my parents taught me to value responsibility, relationship, and kindness. My mother often guided me toward being on top of responsibilities and valuing school and hard work. I learned from her that diligence and being thorough were the beginnings of achieving goals. My father was a enormous source of empathy and compassion. I learned so much about compromise and respect from him.

What you loved most about your mother and why: My mother is truly full of unconditional love and support in all of my decision making and life endeavors. I don't come from a musical family, but she was always 100% in and supportive of my studying the arts in college. She always handled discipline with such grace and understanding that I always had a crystal clear view of her expectations, but under an ever present umbrella of love. I feel comfortable coming to my mom for advice whenever I need it. I admire her strength and diligence.

What you love most about your father and why:

I love how much my father would spend quality time with me. He was always attentive and genuine. There were many times growing up that I felt like my brother and I were often managing and entertaining ourselves, but with my dad, he was always involved. It didn't matter if something wasn't quite his preference or if it was meant for kids. He would watch cartoons with us, play video games with us, and take us to the park.

In comparison to others you were: I was always very naïve and trusting as a young person. Because of this, I was often in tune with others emotions and caring to a fault. I always assumed that people had each others best interests in mind and that it was uncommon or even impossible for people to be genuinely bad or evil. I was also put into the gifted and talented program during my years in elementary school.

Your Teenage Years

Describe yourself as a teenager: I was a very social teenager. I loved talking to lots of people and seeing how their personalities interacted with mine. I definitely had my usual circle of friends, but oddly enough, I felt comfortable floating around to most of the friend groups at my school and feeling included. I definitely struggled with motivation for school-related projects and often found myself procrastinating often so that I could dedicate time to furthering friendships. When I found something that I cared about, I was overwhelmingly pursuing it, and when it didn't excite me, I was often behind on completing it.

Your favorite subject(s) in school and why: My favorite subjects in school were Music and English. I loved these two because of how social and expressive they can be. Music relies on a group of people working together to produce a product as one unit. I loved the atmosphere of cooperation and friendly competition.

Your least favorite subject(s) in school and why: Math was probably my least favorite subject. I often found myself frustrated because I was capable of understanding and working through even the upper level math classes. I just struggled with the motivation to actually sit down and do them.

The activities you were involved in and why: The activity I was most involved in was band. I did it because I loved the community and loved having shared experiences with people I care about. My experience with music are like there are times when listening to music, I have a seemingly spiritual moment and get overwhelmed with positivity. For me, these experiences were stronger when I was participating and playing.

The most important influence on you and why: I can easily say that my High School English teacher was the most important influence on me. I went through some tough times during my transition from junior high to high school. I started slacking off on my schoolwork due to some emotional crisis I was experiencing due to a loss in the family. My English teacher was the driving force behind why I was able to get it together.

In comparison to others you were: Definitely naïve and optimistic. I won't lie, I had a very sheltered life when I was young and it carried through to my teenage years. I think I would say that I had more of a transition than most in my teen years. I went from this happy air-headed kid and came out the other side as someone equipped with the tools to make and express opinions through critical thinking.

You were talented at: Video games and music were the main two things I was good at as a teenager. I was also very good at being social and finding ways to relate to my peers. I tried various things and settled on playing and writing music, and playing competitive video games with my friends.

Your ambition was to: I knew I wanted to work in a place where I had a positive impact on someone every day. Even into my teenage years I was thoughtful and optimistic. I loved hearing other people laugh and loved the little attention highs I would get when it was because of something I did or said. This drove me to aspire to be a teacher so that I could be a positive light in someone's life every day.

Do you attend formal religious gatherings, such as services at church or mosque or other group setting? Not at all.

Are you an Atheist? No

Are you an Agnostic? Yes

Activities/Abilities

Describe your musical abilities or talents: My musical abilities are more mature than most thanks to my undergraduate study in music. I started in band in 5th grade with the saxophone and eventually switched to the trumpet in high school. With a lot of practice and some incredible mentors, I was able to audition and be accepted into a studio at the university that I studied at. Since I studied education as well, I'm proficient at around a middle school level at all of the band class instruments, voice, and piano.

What other skills or talents do you have? Please describe in detail:

I think that I have some talent in storytelling. I find that I'm able to make my stories much more dramatic than they really are and sell it to a group. I even organized and ran a short Dungeons and Dragons campaign with friends as the Dungeon Master. I'm a bit of a fiend at Badminton as well.

Describe any special interests you have:

I have recently found out that I absolutely adore cats and can't wait until I can finally get a couple of my own. I've even got their names picked out and everything. One will be Mochi and the other will be Chashu. I've been looking at getting into video editing as a hobby.

What physical, artistic, intellectual or social abilities do you feel best about and why?

I think I value my sociable personality because it allows me to communicate effectively and never stop learning about people. It's been an invaluable asset to me in my endeavors working at grocery stores and teaching music because I feel so comfortable and natural with other people. I am at my absolute best when I can just be vulnerable and be myself around people.

How do you achieve the goals you set for yourself? The trick is to set realistic goals with clear deadlines and to constantly evaluate and adjust goals as you learn more about yourself and what is realistic to what you are pursuing. Regardless of what skill you are pursuing, nothing beats consistent daily practice with healthy habits and thoughtful processes. Get yourself a trustworthy YouTube tutorial or a teacher so that you can ensure that you aren't constantly cementing bad habits that will hurt you in the future.

Personality Characteristics

What is your favorite song and why? Ask me every day and you'll get a different answer every time. Music is such a human experience that I don't know that I could ever be consistent enough to have one favorite song. BUT... go listen to the Count Basie Band play Shiny Stockings. It has such intense groove and it swings so hard you'll fall over.

Who is your role model and why? I think my role model is absolutely my brother. I looked up to him at every part of my early years and if not for him, I probably wouldn't have started in band in the first place. The reason I did band was because he did and I wanted to try it so we could play together. He was always patient and compassionate with me and we always had the best times together.

What is your favorite color and why?

I love the color pink. I think it is beautiful and is a softer, less aggressive red. My father has always been interested in Japanese artwork and I loved the cherry blossoms that were present in so much of their culture.

If you could travel anywhere where would you go and why?

I would travel to Austria to go listen to their incredible orchestras and opera houses. I want to explore their rich musical history and culture and to stand in Vienna where some of the composers that I've studied and respect did hundreds of years ago.

What is your favorite animal and why? I love cats. They have such strong personalities and emotions.

Nothing is more magical than when a cat decides that you are their person in that moment and jumps up to cuddle in your lap or on your chest. They are so independent that it feels truly special when they want to have to have quality time with you. Plus, their big eyes are so cute and I love playing with them.

What would your best friend say about you? I think they would say that I'm fun to spend time with and that they appreciate that I'm emotionally available for them and genuine with my quality time. They would also tell you that I love to cook food and that you'd need to try some. They'd tell you that I love to play video games and that its tough to beat me once I've spent some time with a game.

What is your favorite sport and why?

I'm too uncoordinated for regular baseball, so I love playing casual wiffleball with friends. At my university we had a tradition of BBQ and wiffleball competition between instrument studios and it was some of the best times.

Where do you see yourself 5 years from now? I see myself either moving up and up in the store that I work now, trying to provide an incredible user experience for customers and greeting and helping as many people as I can in my day at work. If there is a music teaching job at a location and with an administration that I feel comfortable being myself with, I can see myself committing to creating an incredible community of musicians.

What do you value and why? I value relationships and quality time with the people I love. I have always found that material gain is often a temporary pleasure and often feels empty or incomplete. If I can make someone have a more positive day or experience just by interacting with me, if I can be available to those that I love in my spare time... These are the things that breathe life into my existence and that I value most.

Have you ever been told you resemble someone famous? If so, who?

During my student teaching, some of my students called me Dwight Jr from the show The Office..... I still don't know if its a compliment or not. Is wearing a sweater vest that bad?
